Inspired by her early experiences working in a greenhouse setting, Frazier Beall leverages that same love of sustainability to support the attorneys in Gallagher's Renewable Energy practice as a paralegal. Choosing a field known for constant technological and regulatory development, Frazier is able to combine her passion for learning and the environment to help facilitate the financing of new power projects.

Frazier graduated Cum Laude from Furman University with a Bachelor of Science double-major in Politics and International Affairs and Information Technology and a minor in Middle Eastern Studies in 2020. Through her experience in school and afterwards, she honed her critical thinking and organizational skills, which she employs in supporting Gallagher attorneys and clients.

Beyond Gallagher

Outside of work, you can find Frazier cheering on Baltimore sports teams, walking her bulldog around the park, enjoying a happy hour with her friends, or working in her small, but mighty garden. She also enjoys embarking on new adventures, trying local restaurants, and reading by the water.
