Mike Henigan began his legal career at Gallagher more than 25 years ago, first building a solid foundation advising real estate and commercial finance clients, and then adding the renewable energy sector to his practice. Mike's decades of experience with multifaceted projects allow him to provide sensible, grounded guidance to lenders in the development, construction, and permanent financing of solar energy systems throughout the United States.

Mike is drawn to the collaborative aspect of business transactions work – forming personal and business relationships with clients as he works with them toward a common goal. Mike believes that helping clients develop their businesses is just as important as protecting their legal interests, and he prides himself on providing efficient, cost-effective legal services. He wants clients to walk away from every transaction feeling that he helped advance their interests.

Mike has significant experience in the financing, restructuring, and workout of commercial projects of all types. His experience includes financing resources such as tax-exempt bonds, Low-Income Housing Tax Credits (LIHTC), and the New Markets Tax Credits program.

Representative Matters

- Represented lender in connection with initial development/construction financing and subsequent workout and $250M back-levered permanent financing for 250 MWac solar photovoltaic project.
